Scenario 1:

Malguzari tanks were ponds constructed, owned and maintained by the Malguzaars up to 1950. These tanks helped in water harvesting, irrigation and providing fish for local consumption. After the State Government (of Maharashtra) took over ownership of the land and tanks in 1950, the Malguzaars stopped taking care of it as they didn't want to pay the new taxes imposed by the Government. The tanks were left unattended and they dried up.

After nearly 25 years of declaring that the tanks were crucial for irrigation, an Executive Engineer from the Irrigation division of Bhandara region, also a Malguzaar, decided to bring these tanks back alive. With monetary support from the government and getting the community involved in the project, they de-silted the tank and strengthened the boundary wall of the tank. After two years of work, their efforts resulted in recharging groundwater levels, increased agricultural output and fish production in the area, thereby increasing employment opportunities.

Seeing the benefits of the Malguzari tank prompted the district administration to restore another 21 Malguzari tanks in the Bhandara region.

1. The Malguzaars didn't take care of the tanks for so many years, but suddenly joined hands with the engineer to restore it. What could be the reason?
  - a] It is easier to follow and support someone else who takes the initiative and leads.
  - b] The local community might have been desperate as it was affecting agriculture and their livelihood.
  - c] It was a choice for them – they could join hands and see what happens or they could have continued to not care. They chose the former and reaped the benefits.

2. Who do you think benefitted the most in this process?
  - a] The engineer – although he was just an Executive Engineer he was recognized and valued by the local people, the Government and his irrigation department.
  - b] The local community mostly and of course, the engineer would have got some special praise for doing such work.
  - c] Everyone – the entire region, the Government, the local community, & the engineer.

  - a] You need to be interested or feel strongly about some social cause e.g. water conservation or waste management, or any other.
  - b] You need to take any common challenge, find an answer and work towards solving it.

4. This case teaches us that –
  - a] If you take a positive step forward to work on a challenge, others will follow you.
  - b] Someone has to take a step forward to solve the challenges around us.

Scenario 2:

Thousands of women every year, especially in Punjab and Haryana, fall prey to marital fraud by Non-Resident Indian (NRI) spouses. After marriage, the NRI grooms abandon their wives and leave suddenly. A small group of affected women, decided to come together to fight back, not only for themselves, but also for thousands of others who are affected like them.

Bringing the offenders to justice is not simple, as there are no existing provisions in law to effectively address this kind of crime. These women collaborated with the Regional Passport Office (RPO) to take action like suspending the passports of the NRI spouses & withdraw their visas, so that they can be brought back to face the law in the country.

The RPO offered these women a space to work in, along with a dedicated telephone line to reach out to other such victims, and gave them basic training on how to process complaints. They help scores of affected women collect the necessary documents, copies of FIRs, etc. and prepare all the details needed for the suspension of passports.

  - c] We can counsel the affected women and help them come out of their troubles.

6. What would be a smarter thing to do when trying to solve tough problems?
  - a] We must keep finding solutions to problems as they come.
  - b] We must find solutions that prevent problems from occurring.
7. What kind of thinking will have a long-term impact?
  - a] Educating families that getting girls married off is not an end to their responsibilities.
  - b] Strict implementation of punishment to the men who are found guilty of abandoning their wives after marriage.
8. What made these women come together to take action?
  - a] They believed “Together, we can make sure that our situation is taken into consideration by the concerned authorities”.
  - b] They believed “It’s up to us to find answers to our troubles”.
  - c] They believed “We will get justice if people see that so many of us have been affected”.
